Live Q&A Session

- Was a drop in China related FCPA cases after the recent crackdown on corruption in China?
- Is the company obliged to report the wrongdoing of the suspected employee to the Chinese authority (e.g., report a suspected crime to the PSB) immediately, even before an internal investigation?
- If we spot out the interviewee is lying, is it ok to point out that during the interview?
- What if the interviewee only admit that it was unintentional mistake or incompetence rather than deliberately concealing the fact?
- What about if the interviewee asks to bring a lawyer? Should we than bring also our legal counsel?
- While the Whistleblower protection processes protects the whistleblowers, we do also need to protect our staff from other staff who may have malicious intent in their reporting? We do need to incorporate these within the framework.
- Is the interviewee's signature is a MUST in order to make the interview record legally effective?
- What is the difference between "suspect employee" and "suspected wrongdoers"?
